

Wisdom School: The Dharma of Pleasure.
Audio: 06 -- Friday Afternoon, Part Three (After Exercise)
TRT: 00:02:32
Speaker: Marc Gafni

>> So, thank you. The realization of tomorrow, which is a perfect place to end. Because, of course, we are in the Garden, and, tomorrow, we're going to walk the Garden. That's what we're going to do tomorrow. We're going to actually go through and get the principles of pleasure, and we're really going to engage fully every level of pleasure, from tomorrow until the end of the weekend, in a way that we can actually taste it, feel it, practice it and, actually, shift; actually up-regulate our dopamine receptors, on a neurological frame and an internal frame, to literally redraw our pleasure maps.

So, we're actually going tomorrow, based on the kind of ground work we laid today, on an enlightenment journey. Not to get more information but to actually engage the actual process of re-entering or awakening to the Garden that's here. And we're doing it, not only for our selves, individually. We're doing it to actually draw this pleasure map, and, then, be able to share it, through the various structures we're creating.

So, what's happening, here, tomorrow is we're trying to make it this Dharma alive and real. And as we develop this Dharma together, it will find its way into a book there and a book there and a program there. We're actually secreting a Dharma that's, then, going to be translated into programs, teachings.

And, so, tomorrow, we're holding this Dharma mystically -- for the sake of the evolution of love. We're also holding it practically, because the nature of our engagement in the Wisdom School at Shalom Mountain -- and the Wisdom School, which kind of works together with the CWS, the Center for World Spirituality, context. So, we actually evolve a Dharma together, as a Sangha. And, then, we seek to translate that Dharma -- that vision of the patterns that connect -- into the very real structures of the world, by actually making it alive, in our own lives.

So, as opposed to the Academy, where it's about writing a paper; here, it's about actually, let's make this alive, as a Sangha. Develop deep structures of mind, body and heart. And, then, translate them into the actual source codes of culture and, actually, evolve the source code, itself.

That's the highest game you can play. So, let's play it tomorrow. Have the most, most beautiful night. We'll meet about an hour and 15 minutes, something like that, Jeff, after dinner?